PERRY & CAMP

75 North Main Street

Barre, Vermont

IT'S a safe guess that in all the homes there are no two bedrooms furnished exactly alike. An evidence of variety in tastes; the bedroom lends itself to the tastes of the occupant as no other room does.

We know this, and we have done everything possible to get together bedroom furniture that you will like. Nearly every variety of wood, every style, every period, every color and every finish is shown here. The prices are low and range from figures that give good furniture to the modest home to prices that represent the finest material and skill in furniture manufacture.

No matter what brings you to this store, whether it is to buy furniture or to enjoy a rest while looking at pretty things, you are equally welcome.

See the beautiful Inlay Circassian Walnut Suite that we are showing in our windows this week. Not expensive.

The only place in town where the famous Hoosier Kitchen Cabinets are sold. Cash or credit.

Smith & Dasher, real estate agents, have sold for J. J. Dasher his large farm, stock, crops, and tools located in Washington, known as the Col. Thomas farm. This farm contains over 100 acres of land, 100 acres of tillage, large amount of timber and wood, sugar and fruit orchards, large 18-room house, furnace heated and electric lighted, large basement-barn that will tie 50 cows, young stock and team. The purchaser is Fredrick Vermette of Naperville, P. Q., who will take possession about Oct. 1. This property is located one mile from Washington village and considered one of the best farm propositions in this section. The property was listed with the agents at $10,000.

Mrs. John H. Kelley of West hill left yesterday for Waterbury Center, where she will attend the reception to be tendered in honor of M. L. Dillingham, a cousin, who is celebrating his 82d birthday to-day. A number of other Barre people left to-day to attend the reception. Mr. Dillingham, who is a cousin of United States Senator Dillingham of Waterbury, was born in the town of Waterbury and has resided there his entire lifetime. For years he has been prominently identified with the affairs of the Grand Army association of Washington county. It was from Waterbury that Mr. Dillingham enlisted in the ranks of the federal army in the Civil war in 1861. That Mr. Dillingham is a man well preserved in health, hale and hearty, was well evinced this past summer when the aged gentleman mounted the rake and performed an able-bodied man's duties during the haying season at the Kelley farm on west hill.

BUILDING UP A HOLSTEIN HERD—II

The Growing of the Calf and Other Points.

A. A. HARTSHORN.

After selecting the foundation animals, comes the caring for, growing, and developing the young ones; in other words, it is up to the owner to work with those animals and accomplish the desired results. A careful study of the likes, dislikes and requirements of the animals and judgment in supplying them, is necessary for the accomplishment of the best results. The calf should never be allowed to stop growing, from birth to full development, and should be fed food that will form bone and muscle, but never fattened until a short time before the heifer drops her first calf, and then a moderate amount of fat should be stored away in the system, in order that she may have it to draw upon to supply the necessary fat for the large flow of milk we expect her to give the first season. For some time after calving, the heifer should be milked three times daily, even four times is better, in order to develop her. She should be fed to produce a large flow of milk the year through until about two months before she drops her next calf, when she should be dried off and again fed so as to be built up for another season of hard work. If this process is continued until the heifer is fully developed, it will only take a few such cows to produce as much milk as some large herds are giving. In selecting foundation animals, don't judge cows from one or two good qualities, perhaps those of minor importance, at that; but pass judgment after taking into consideration every part of the animal. If you place special emphasis on certain qualifications, be sure that it is in the right place, and not do as many are doing—discard a great cow because she has not a long, slim tail, or a bull because he has not good rudimentary or something similar, things really of minor importance.

Judges of Always Right. Another point is that even our best judges place too great stress upon the straight, level back, for it is only a mark of beauty. Now, the idea that a cow should carry well out to roots of tail is a good one, but fine producers have the high pelvic arch, giving the appearance of having a sloping rump; the mammary nerves center in this region, and if there is a preponderance of those nerves the tendency is to cause an elevation of that point, which gives the animal the appearance of a sloping rump. A good, level rump is more pleasing to the eye, and I do not discourage breeding that way, if we can do so without injuring the producing ability. What I have said applies not only to breeders of Holsteins, but to breeders of all dairy cattle; let us keep in mind the primary object is breeding an animal pre-eminent useful as a producer, and, if we fail in this, the rest is of little account, no matter how pleasing the cow may be to the eye.

Quality is more important than price when it comes to buying rubber goods. From external appearances, there may seem to be but little difference between the highest and lowest grades. But if you happen to get hold of the unworthy kind, the defects will soon become apparent. The rubber goods which we carry are strictly high-grade and our prices are reasonable. See us for

HOME-RAISED BACON—I.

More Money in It Than in Lard.

The bacon pig is raised under conditions that are conducive to soil improvement. Born in the early spring, they can be pastured all summer on alfalfa, clover, or rape, and they will, under ordinary conditions, with a small allowance of grain, make rapid growth; pastures are greatly improved by swine running them, especially when planted with catch crops. The prevailing idea in our eastern states that pigs should be kept in pens and allowed little exercise, is not only wrong, but an expensive one. Pigs in their natural state are grass-eating animals, and should be treated accordingly. To put bacon pigs in condition for market, we have only to increase the grain ration by adding such grains as will make good hard flesh, with only a moderate amount of fat. Ground peas, gluten meal, with a little corn, will soon put the pigs in prime condition. A piggy suitable for three grown pigs should contain three roomy pens, one for the boar and one for each sow, with concrete floors sloping to the center, where there should be a drain to carry off the water. A slightly raised wooden platform must be provided for the pigs to sleep on; the pens should be arranged with connecting doors and yards, not less than 8x12 feet.

Provide Pasturage.

The building should be well constructed, have a place for a cooking boiler, and plenty of sun and air should be provided.
